

“Evidently you are in a prosperous condition, but what will you do if the Democrats repeal the protective tariff?”

“Our business would be ruined. It is entirely dependent on the tariff. The woollen industry in this country has grown up under the present tariff system, and would speedily be prostrated if left without protection.”

There are two other woollen mills in Trenton, of smaller size. The industry employs about 600 hands. Five rubber factories are in operation, employing altogether about 400 hands. Then there are saw works, glue factories, shops for decorating china, and terra-cotta works. Mr. John Taylor, the Republican candidate for the State Senate, who is well posted on the subject of the industrial operations of this busy little city, estimates that not fewer than 10,000

The machinery for all the paper hangings factories in the country is made here. The machinery used in the rubber and hosiery factories is also three fourths of New-Brunswick shops. There are three machine shops whose success depends just as much upon the tariff as does that of the factories they supply. Four firms are engaged in the manufacture of shoes. A company occupying large buildings and employing 450 hands makes fruit jars. Two shops are occupied in making needles, and there are a number of minor manufacturing enterprises.

New-Brunswick is the home of Mr. Ludlow, the Democratic candidate for Governor, who is spoken of as a good lawyer and a worthy citizen, but a can-

"I'll throw myself out like him, and there'll be a pair of us!"— unch.

ismarek and Melike at Sedan.—An article of extraordinary interest, giving the memorable conversation be-836 and 838 Broadway, New-York.

Office, New-York, September 25. 1894.